Alfa Laval wins SEK 125 million offshore order

Alfa Laval – a world leader in heat transfer, centrifugal separation and fluid handling – has won an order to supply Framo pumping systems to an FPSO (Floating Production Storage Offloading) vessel in the North Sea. The order has a value of approximately SEK 125 million. It is booked late March in the Pumping Systems unit of the Marine Division, with deliveries scheduled for 2018.

“I am very pleased to announce another large order in a very short period of time for our Framo pumping systems,” says Peter Leifland, President of the Marine Division. “It proves our ability to meet the offshore industry’s high demands when it comes to safety.”

Did you know that... the first Framo pumping systems to platforms in the North Sea were delivered already in the 1970’s?
