Alfa Laval wins SEK 65 million wastewater treatment order

Alfa Laval – a world leader in heat transfer, centrifugal separation and fluid handling – has won an order for decanters to be installed in wastewater treatment plants in Italy. The order has a value of approximately SEK 65 million and is booked in the Decanter unit of the Food & Water Division. Deliveries are scheduled for 2020.

The order comprises Alfa Laval decanters to be used for dewatering sludge at the wastewater treatment plants. The order also includes service agreements

“We have a broad range of reliable and efficient products for wastewater treatment. Efficient treatment concentrates the sludge and makes it usable as fertilizer – and it also results in higher quantities of clean water, which is good for the environment,” says Nish Patel, President of the Food & Water Division.

Did you know that... that according to the UN World Water Development Report, on average, high-income countries treat about 70% of the municipal and industrial wastewater they generate – but in low-income countries, only 8% undergoes treatment of any kind?
